Asian awareness begins

Hopes to educate people are high

by Sue Barnes

April is Asian Pacific Cultural Month at De Anza, and events planned for this month have been designed to educate students by increasing their ethnic awareness and appreciation for Asian/Pacific art.

La Donna Yumori-Kaku, activities adviser, is hopeful that the planned activities will help to sensitize people to the stereotyping of Asians and other ethnic groups.

Running throughout the month is a free exhibition of both traditional and modern Japanese folk crafts by Tadashi Toyota which will be displayed in the Learning Center.

On Monday, a free concert, "On the Orient Express," featuring a group of professional actors and musicians was held in the Student Council Chambers. On Wednesday, the Asian Pacific American Student Club held an Asian food sale in the Campus Center. Also on Wednesday at this location were Korean, Japanese and Asian dance performances.

Two free showings of the film "Enter the Dragon," starring Bruce Lee will be held in Forum 1 from 12:30-2:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

In "An Asian Man Discusses Asian Women," award-winning film maker

Curtis Choy presents a dialogue which will be held free of charge in L-90 from 10:30-11:20 a.m.

Wednesday, April 24 brings the first of two events concerning a modern ethical issue—the incarceration of Japanese-Americans during World War II. This free documentary, scheduled from 11:30—12:30 p.m. in L-90, investigates the story of three men who, in refusing to be incarcerated, challenged the United States government. On Thursday, in L-90 from 11:30-12:30 p.m., one of the challengers, Fred Korematsu and Attorney Karen Kai will discuss the conviction of the three men for defying the government.

The events conclude on Monday, April 29 with the free showing of the videotape, "Life, Tradition and Contribution in America of the Chinese, Vietnamese, Cambodian and Laotian" from 8:30-10:20 a.m. in the Student Council Chambers.

Asian Pacific American Cultural Month is sponsored by the De Anza Associated Student Body, the Multicultural Department and the Bilingual Center. Anyone wishing more information should contact the Multicultural Department.

Old cannery burns down

In all, it took 33 firefighters and 330,000 gallons of water to contain the blaze. Assistant Chief Richard Thaxton received minor injuries when he fell and took hold of a burning beam. However, Thaxton was able to drive himself to emergency and get the nine stitches required to repair the gash in his hand.

Dave Heck, who has lived two blocks away from the cannery since 1946, recalled, "the cannery used to process prunes and apricots every season, and when tomatoes were in season, the cannery smelled like an Italian kitchen because they used to make tomato paste."

The cannery went into operation in 1926. Measurex bought the property over a decade ago from the Woelffel family. The building was used for storage but was not guarded. The cannery was slated for demolition in the near future.

Bookstore prey to gunman that for obvious reasons I'm not at liberty to discuss."

This was the first armed hold-up in the Bookstore's 18 year history, Pacciorretti said. However, there has been a break-in and a break-in attempt.

Several years ago a bookstore employee shattered one of the lower windows and began going through the shelves. Sheriff's Department Deputies heard the alarm and caught him in the act.

The would-be thief in the break-in attempt incident was apparently scared off by the alarm.
